COUNTY FRUIT
SWEEPS SHOW

Forty Prizes Won by Adams County
Fruit in Big State Exhibit at Wilkes Barre. Twenty Four Firsts and Fifteen Seconds.

Adams County's fruit swept the big State show now on at Wilkes-Barre, a dispatch from there to The Times this afternoon telling that the exhibit of the Fruit Growers' Association of Adams County had won the county exhibit prize and that twenty four first ribbons and fifteen second ribbons had been captured by exhibitors from this county.

By this exceptional showing Adams County establishes itself pre-eminent in fruit growing in Pennsylvania and adds another to its long list of victories at similar events. The county exhibit was made up largely of the fruit shown at the recent annual convention at Bendersville and was composed of the many varieties grown in the orchards of the local fruit belt. It was in charge of some of the best known growers of the county who had it attractively arranged and the exhibit from Adams was the great feature of the show.

In addition to the distinction this county gains by these awards, further prominence comes here in the re-election of an Adams County man as president of the State Horticultural Association. C. J. Tyson, of Flora Dale, was again chosen for that office at the election held on Wednesday. Other officers chosen were: Vice presidents, Dr. I. H. Mayer, Willow Street; William J. Lewis, Pittston; F. H. Fassett, Meshoppen; secretary, J. A. Runk, Huntingdon; treasurer Edwin W. Thomas, King of Prussia.

An invitation to meet next year in Reading was referred to the Executive Committee.
At the second day's proceedings Wednesday morning, Dr. J. P. Stewart, orchard specialist of Pennsylvania State College, gave a talk on "Some Observations of the Past Seven Years." He explained his subject by charts, showing the effects of different fertilizers and the value of cover crops. How apple trees should be pruned was told by Professor Wendall Paddock, of the Ohio University.
S. H. Fulton, of West Virginia, spoke on "Utilization of Vacant Space in the Young Apple Orchard."

At the afternoon session a talk was given by Professor M. G. Kains, of State College, on "Solving the Low-grade Fruit Problem". R. H. Bell, of Williamsport, the Lycoming County farm agent, made an earnest plea in behalf of the work of farm bureau.

Professor Paddock concluded his subject of pruning trees by giving lantern-slide illustrations.

The vegetable growers of the association were addressed by specialists in another hall of the building. In the morning Professor C. E. Myers, of State College, spoke on "Principles of Plant Breeding," and Daniel Dean, of Nichols, N. Y., on "Potato Culture."

In the afternoon others who spoke were: Professor E. L. Worthen, of State College; Emmor Roberts, of New Jersey, and Professor Paul Work, of Cornell University.

STARTLING FACTS
AT WILL HEARING

Frequent Appearance of Rats in Runkel Home Brought out in Testimony of One Witness. Did not Recognize Money.

Remarkable facts were brought out at the hearing of the Runkel will case which was resumed before Register and Recorder Gardner this morning. The feeding of rodents in the house and other conditions were described by witnesses who produced testimony of a more unusual nature than that given at former hearings.

Mrs. D. J. Swartz, who has resided for many years opposite the old Runkel home, was the first witness to be called. She told of having been at the Runkel house some time before her removal and of calling Miss Runkel's attention to two or three piles of money several inches high lying on a shelf. "Why is that money?" asked Miss Runkel in surprise according to the testimony of the witness. The money, Mrs. Swartz, said was partly covered with dust.

Mrs. Swartz said she had known Miss Runkel for fifty years. The witness corroborated the former testimony as to the time when carelessness in the care of Miss Runkel's home first became apparent—about 1901 when the residence was remodeled. In 1911—the year she was removed from her home to that of Mrs. Erter—Miss Runkel seemed to be like a child from two to three years of age.

In cross-examination Mr. Hersh asked Mrs. Swartz, "You knew Miss Annie was blind in one eye?" "No sir" was the reply.

Preston S. Tate, another neighbor, was the second witness of the morning. He lived in a house belonging to Miss Runkel and told that, in paying rent, he felt that a witness should be present so that there would be no danger of its again being demanded. When he first moved to the place he did not think this precaution necessary.

Mr. Tate told of fearing fire through Miss Runkel's carelessness, of watching her at night through a window, seeing her go down stairs with a lighted candle and getting food from a stove. According to the testimony Miss Runkel would throw bits of food on the floor which rats would come and get. This occurred a dozen times as many as five rats appearing at one time. The rodents apparently had no fear of Miss Runkel but immediately scattered when the witness appeared in the house when he went to perform some service for her.

In 1909 Mr. Tate and John Thorn went into the Runkel house and cleaned the windows in preparation for Memorial Day. Conditions were so offensive on the second story of the house that they left as soon as possible. Onions and potatoes were lying about the floor and had sprouted some inches.

Miss Runkel had a cat, said the witness, which was in the house for about a year without to his knowledge, ever getting out doors. The cat finally died and was kept in the house a week or ten days before burial. The owner objected to interference. Mr. Tate testified, as she said she wanted to wait "until the frost came out of the ground so that she could give it a decent burial."

Her mental condition the witness said was that of a child about three or four years of age.
At the opening of this morning's hearing, William Hersh Esq., counsel for Mrs. Erter, stated that the defense did not dispute the condition of the Runkel home as told at last week's hearing, and that they also did not dispute Miss Runkel's physical condition while living in her old home as related last week.

CONSTABLE ARRESTED

Cross Suit on Larceny Charge against Gettysburg Officer.

On a charge of larceny growing out of the removal of a horse found on a search warrant, Constable John Shealer, of Gettysburg, and John Stevens, of Heidelsburg, were haled before Squire Harnish on Wednesday and gave bail for a hearing at York. Mr. Shealer some months ago arrested Kamps Kister in York on a charge of stealing a horse belonging to Stevens. The case is listed for trial in Adams County Court next week. Mr. Shealer, on identification of Mr. Stevens, got the horse through a search warrant several months ago in York and the animal was brought back to the Stevens place. Kister was engaged in trading horses in the vicinity of Heidelsburg last summer.

MILITARY ACADEMY
OF INDIAN SCHOOL

Latest Plan for Carlisle Institution would Take away All the Girls to Other Schools. Plan Academy Like West Point.

A bill proposing the reorganization of the Carlisle Indian School into the United States Indian Military Academy was introduced in the House by Representative Stephens, of Texas, chairman of the House Committee on Indian Affairs.

The bill contemplates the introduction of a course of military instruction at the Carlisle school, similar to that now pursued at the West Point Military Academy. An appropriation of $200,000 would be provided for carrying out the reorganization, which is to take effect July 1.

The principal effect of the bill will be to abolish the co-educational and industrial and vocational features of the present school and to make it a military academy under the supervision of a Board of Control composed of the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Interior and an army officer to be appointed by the President, who will serve as superintendent of the school. Hereafter, if the bill is passed, the Indian girls will be sent to other schools in different parts of the country.

The bill provides that all the buildings and property of the present Carlisle school be turned over to the proposed military academy, and the graduates of the academy will be available for service in the army, if needed, for a period of seven years following their graduation. There will be a three years course of study, to be modeled after that now pursued at West Point.

ASKS BRITAIN TO EXPLAIN SEIZURE

U. S. Steamer Was Occupied by Prize Crew.

O. K'D BY ENGLISH CONSUL

The American Flag Was Hauled Down and Ship Detained Two Days Before Being Allowed to Proceed.

Washington, Jan. 21.—The state department has requested of the British embassy information of why the American steamer Greenbrier, from New York to Bremen, with cotton, under a certificate of the British consul at New Orleans, was stopped by a British cruiser, sent under the British flag to a British port, and detained two days before being allowed to complete the voyage.

The detention of the Greenbrier was brought to the attention of the state department by telegrams from Captain Farley, her commander, now at Bremen. Farley said that at a point on the north Atlantic, which he fixed by longitude and latitude, the Greenbrier was overhauled Dec. 30 by a British cruiser.

The boarding officer required him to continue on his course, conveyed by the cruiser for a day or two while the cargo of the steamer was being searched for arms.

The cruiser placed aboard the Greenbrier some additional British officers who hoisted the British flag, and a prize crew who navigated the ship so that, according to Captain Farley, she was damaged before she was brought into Kirkwall. There the Greenbrier remained for three days, Captain Farley refusing to sail her further except under the American flag.

The British authorities finally consented to the raising of the American flag and Captain Farley took his ship to Leith, where a pilot was picked up and the Greenbrier was taken to Bremen.

The points on which the state department wants information are: First, why it was necessary to search the Greenbrier, in view of the certificate issued by the British consul at New Orleans; and second, why a neutral merchant vessel was compelled to lower her flag when under no known rule could she be regarded as a prize.

The British ambassador is expected to get a report on the subject from the London foreign office.

Representatives of the owner of the steamer Dacia, now loading cotton at Port Arthur, Texas, for Rotterdam or Bremen, have informed the state department that as soon as loaded the steamer will start on her voyage regardless of the decision of the British government to seize her.

It was said at the department that Ambassador Page's statement that the British government had declined to sanction the Dacia's voyage was regarded as final, although no formal or official communication from Great Britain had so far been received. The department will take no further action in the case at this stage.

If the Dacia is seized and taken before a prize court it is probable that in view of the novelty and importance of the issues involved, the department will instruct the American ambassador in London to have the United States government legally represented before the court, if that is permitted by the rules.

LIVES TO SPITE WIFE

Scranton Man Refuses Operation Lest She Get Insurance.

Scranton, Pa., Jan. 21.—Declaring that he will die before submitting to an operation to relieve him of internal trouble, George Kiddulat, a watchmaker, told doctors he "will live for spite," so that his wife, respondent in a divorce suit, will not get $1000 insurance.

Kiddulat is suing on the grounds of desertion, and the wife has demanded trial by jury. When the case was called in court and continued, Kiddulat met a peace overture from the wife's lawyer with the retort:

"I knew a fellow who was operated on and died. They won't get me on an operating table. Rosie won't get that insurance money so easily."

THORN MENACED BY CZAR'S FORCES

KAISER'S MEN FALL BACK

Berlin Hears From the Front That the Russian Offensive Movement is Broken.

Petrograd, Jan. 21.—Another daring cavalry drive by Russian Cossacks has carried the advance lines of Grand Duke Nicholas' troops to the very border of East Prussia, only nineteen miles from Thorn, the great military base upon which the Germans rely for their supplies in the campaign in Poland.

An official statement reported sharp fighting at Dobryzn. This town is on the river Drewenz, which is one of the defenses of Thorn and forms part of the boundary line between East Prussia and Poland.

The official statement also shows that the Germans south of the Vistula are trying desperately to relieve the pressure on the kaiser's troops in northern Poland by attempting to cross the Vistula and attack the Russians near Wyszogrod, after massing troops at the junction of the Bzura and Vistula, preparatory to crossing the latter stream.

The German batteries were silenced, however, and the Teuton troops had to abandon their attempt for the time being.

Following up the silencing of the German batteries, the Russians plunged across the Bzura river and once more gained a position on the left bank of that stream. The Siberian troops captured two trenches and have held them despite eight counterattacks by the Germans.

The Russian front in Poland now runs in an irregular line through Mlawa, Szems, Radzanow and Biezun, while a great cavalry force is repelling all attacks on the front from Biezun to Dobryzn.

Artillery engagements at Radzanow and Biezun have resulted in Russian successes, but thus far neither the Russian nor the German infantry has been able to gain any marked advantages. Many of the German batteries have been destroyed at Radzanow.

The Germans have tried to cut the Mlawa-Warsaw railroad, south of Mlawa, but their raiding parties have been driven back at every attempt.

Russian Offensive Broken, Says Berlin

Berlin, Jan. 21.—That the Russian offensive against the Austro-German armies has completely broken down is the declaration made by an eye-witness of operations in the eastern theater of war, sent by the German government to the centre of operations to supply dispatches for Berlin newspapers.

His dispatch, being advised by the German commander, may be regarded as official. This eye-witness quotes a member of the general staff as saying that for months the Russians will be unable to resume the offensive, and continues:

"The Russians sent such strong forces to their right wing, in order to protect Warsaw, that they are unable to undertake any decisive operations in Galicia or against Hungary."

EARTHQUAKE ROCKS FRENCH WAR ZONE

Shocks Also Felt Throughout Switzerland.

Paris, Jan. 21.—A severe earthquake rocked the houses in Belfort, in some cases furniture was overturned and the doors of residences were burst open.

A second shock occurred at Mont Bellard, in southeastern France. It was so severe that the inhabitants were shaken out of their beds and crockery was smashed.

An earthquake occurred throughout Switzerland. The disturbance caused many heavy avalanches in the Alps mountains.

Several buildings in Chaux de Fonds and Locle, in the canton of Neuchâtel, were wrecked by the earthquake. The waters of Lake Neuchâtel rose for an unprecedented height and swept away several buildings on the shore, but their occupants escaped.

The shocks, which numbered seven and occurred during a period of about nine minutes, were also felt lightly at Zurich, but caused only trifling damage there. Further shocks, with small damage, were reported from the cities of Berne and Zurich.

Belfort, Jan. 21.—The Prince of Wales, traveling incognito, has just made a trip to the front in upper Alsace despite the storm which has been raging. He also inspected the military workshops in Belfort.

The prince, by his unaffected simplicity, created a most favorable impression among the population, who were especially impressed because he insisted upon taking a small room on the third floor of a hotel instead of the grand suite which was reserved for him.

One Dead, Two Injured, in Explosion.

Johnstown, Pa., Jan. 21.—Matt Straber, a miner, was burned to death; Clyde Shaner will die and Nelson Swanson escaped with serious burns when a quantity of gunpowder exploded and set fire to five barrels of oil in the supply house of the Miller Coal company at Portage. An electric light globe was broken and, falling into an open keg of powder, touched it off.

London, Jan. 21.—An Amsterdam dispatch to the Central News says a Cologne dispatch received there announced that two hostile airmen were seen over Cologne.

22 DEPUTIES ARRESTED

Men Involved in Fatal Strike Clash at Roosevelt Put Under Bail.

Roosevelt, N. J., Jan. 21.—Mayor Joseph A. Hermann announced that warrants had been issued for the arrest of twenty-two deputy sheriffs involved in the shooting of nineteen striking laborers at the Lehigh plant of the American Agricultural Chemical company.

The warrants charge manslaughter. Of the men wounded one died and several others are in a critical condition.

The deputies were later arraigned in New Brunswick and pleaded not guilty. They were held in $3000 bail each.

The warrants for the deputies were issued at the instance of the county prosecutor, W. E. Florence. Mayor Hermann declared that he was going to force the settlement of the trouble between the strikers and their employers to an issue.

"I had 150 of the strikers searched for arms directly after the shooting," he declared, "and not a single weapon was found on any of them."

CARNEGIE FUND HONORS 44 HEROES

11 Silver, 33 Bronze Medals and Money Awarded.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 21.—Forty-four acts of heroism, largely those of young men and women in widely scattered places in the United States and Canada, were recognized at the eleventh annual meeting of the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission here by the award of eleven silver medals and bronze medals in the other thirty-three cases.

Thirteen of the heroes lost their lives, and to the dependents of seven of these pensions aggregating $3000 a year were granted; to the dependents of four others who lost their lives, sums totaling $3000, to be applied, subject to the direction of the commission, in various ways, were granted.

In addition to these money grants, in eight cases sums aggregating $14,000 were appropriated for educational purposes, payments to be made as needed and approved; and in twenty-three cases awards aggregating $21,615 were made, to be applied toward the purchase of homes, the liquidation of indebtedness, and to other worthy purposes. Payments in these cases will not be made until the beneficiaries' plan for the use of the awards have been approved by the commission.

Among those who received bronze medals were:

James F. Smith, Annapolis, Md., twenty-four years old, attempted to save Blanche C. Curran, twenty-three years old, from drowning in a sailing accident, Aug. 10, 1913.

Edgar L. Rayne, Berlin, Md., twenty years old, saved Henry L. Harrison, aged sixteen, from drowning in a boating accident July 13, 1912.

R. Emil Drummer (deceased), aged twenty-two years; died attempting to save Alfred M. Scheer, twenty-four years old, from drowning at Westville, N. J., June 29, 1913. Medal and pension to widow in Gornsdorf, Saxony, Germany.

Woman Burned to Death.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 21.—Coroner Eekinger is investigating the death of Mrs. Emma Etter, fifty-five years old, who was found burned to death in her home in this city. The woman's husband discovered her head in the bathroom of her home, the house filled with smoke, and indications are that she either saturated her clothing with oil and set herself afire or that she was the victim of foul play.

Washington Dry in 1916.

Olympia, Wash., Jan. 21.—The state legislature rushed through both the house and senate a resolution declaring against holding a special election in 1915 on the liquor or any other question. This means that Washington will go "dry" in January, 1916, under the initiative bill passed last November by the voters.

Lynch Colored Man in City Limits.

Vicksburg, Miss., Jan. 21.—Edward Johnson, a young colored man, was taken from a deputy sheriff by a mob within the Vicksburg city limits and lynched. He had been charged with stealing cattle.

TEST NEW DEVICE TO STOP WRECKS

Experts See Locomotive Avoid Collision Automatically.

INVENTED BY TELEGRAPHER.

Based on Block Signal System—Train
in One Block Cannot Enter Block Ahead if Train in That Block and if Track Ahead is Obstructed Gradually Comes to a Standstill.

A locomotive—No. 47 of the Long Island railroad, Harry Lefferts' standby—bounced itself to President Ralph Peters' old special car of wood in New York and set out at twenty-eight miles an hour to run down another locomotive that stood peacefully on an empty stretch of track near Garden
City, on Long Island.

After he had set No. 47 going Harry Lefferts leaned out the cab window and paid not the least attention to anything anywhere. As his locomotive neared a first class collision its whistles blew, the steam went off, the air
went on and No. 47 eased down gradually to a standstill without Lefferts
or any one else moving a finger.

That was the third successful test in one hour of a new device to prevent train collisions. After it was over A.
B. Bierck, representing President Peters of the Long Island road, said:

"The tests have been successful,
more so perhaps than could have been expected. The Long Island and Pennsylvania roads will undoubtedly make further tests, and if the invention
stands up under them they will adopt
it."

Experts See Test.

Besides Mr. Bierck, who is the Long Island's general auditor, L. S. Wells, superintendent of electrical operation
for the two roads; H. E. Lewis, the Long Island's general trainmaster, and
G. P. Williams, assistant to the Long Island's chief engineer, watched the tests. With them was James E. Regan, proprietor of the Hotel Knickerbocker, New York, who has bought a controlling interest in the invention,
and Anthony J. Casale, the inventor.

Casale, a native of Naples, was a telegraph operator in Italy. He came to this country fourteen years ago and has worked on his invention ever since.
It was when he came to the Knickerbocker as a telegrapher fifteen months ago, with his apparatus nearly perfected, that he found a lacker in Mr.
Regan.

Alden W. Welch, associate editor of the Engineering News, newspaper reporters and motion picture men made up the rest of the party.

Casale's invention is based on the block signal system. A train in one block cannot enter the block ahead if
a train is in that block or if the track
ahead is broken or obstructed or if a station agent throws a switch.

At the end of each block of track
are two short stretches of third rail on both sides of the track. Shoes on the locomotive make the contact with these bits of rail. If the track ahead is clear the circuit formed carries a slight
current that nothing in the locomotive is affected. But if a train is in the block ahead or the track is broken or
the station agent has thrown a switch
the circuit formed by the onrushing train is so short that a more powerful current flows. This current sets off the locomotive's whistle and then shuts off the steam and applies the emergency brakes.

Batteries in Locomotive.

Those who know a little about electricity will understand when it is said
that this is accomplished by ten batteries in the locomotive with three solenoid coils and three relays. The first relay operates when the track is broken or the invention itself is out of order. It shuts off steam and applies the brakes. This is the relay by which a station agent can stop a train that has gone past a signal. The second relay, which works with a train
in the block ahead, blows the locomotive whistle. The third acts like the first to shut off steam and apply the brakes. One of the great points is the placing of batteries in the locomotive
where they can be renewed without trouble.

LEARNED WORM AT HARVARD.

One Eyed Pete Learns by Experience
What Road to Travel.

An educated worm is the last word
in Harvard's circles of learning.

One Eyed Pete is his name. He thinks like a human being. Professor R. M. Yerkes, who adopted Pete, rigged up a device full of holes like a cheese. At one end of one large hole were two other paths, one of which led to a comfortable resting place.
The other was charged with electricity.

Pete took the wrong road three times
and was shocked each time. Now he avoids this aperture and always takes the hole to the right.

Biggest Map of Canal.

Members of the isthmian canal commission had before them for inspection
what is said to be the largest relief
map ever made, representing the Panama canal on a scale of one foot to a mile. The map, which is fifty feet by ten, was completed by George Robertson of Washington, to whom the contract for the work was given by the commission. It will be shipped to the Panama-Pacific exposition.

"I don't know what to use to raise my

he didn't say it aloud.

GRAND DUKE NICHOLAS OF RUSSIA A GIANT.

Basil Miles Gives Pen Portrait of Towering Military Commander.

At the feast of the Prebrazhenski regiment in St. Petersburg shortly after the Russian-Japanese war Sir Ian Hamilton was watching the great warrior arrive, one after another. He himself was present as a distinguished British general. Both individually and collectively the Russian guards officers are a fine lot. But he suddenly ejaculated, "By Jove, who's that?" He pointed to a towering figure at least six feet four in height, with close cropped black hair shot through with gray,
short, pointed Vandylke beard, extraordinary length of limb, but lean and graceful, with exceptional ease and power of movement—a magnificent figure of a man. It was the Grand Duke Nicholas Nikolaevitch, says Basil Miles
in the World's Work.

The grand duke, now commander in chief of the armies of Russia, was born
the year after the Crimean war and was fifty-eight last October. But he still radiates an impression of easy power and strength. His grandfather was the son of that Czar Nicholas I.
whose physique was famous in Europe.
When a mob gathered in the Sadowaya
in those early days a story is still current of how the great czar drove to the scene, got out of his carriage and strode out along, gigantic and threatening, and with a single mighty roar
produced a stunned silence through which he lectured the huddled crowd
like a stern but just father and sent them away tamed. His great-grandson
inherits much of his physical power.
Although the military career of the Grand Duke Nicholas has attracted little attention outside of Russia, largely because he has concentrated wholeheartedly on each phase as he met it,
his present supreme command is nevertheless the logical result of a consistent rise through all ranks, not because but almost in spite of his imperial blood.

UNUSUAL PSYCHOLOGY TEST.

Scientist Suicide Tries to Prove He Heard Fatal Shot.

Despondent because all his relatives
in Germany had been killed in the war, Charles Mayo, an aged chemist and
student of psychic phenomena, committed suicide in Chicago. The last act of his life—the act which terminated that life—Mayo used in an experiment with the psychology of death. This experiment he explained in a note to Charles Gutowski, one of his subordinates and his confidant. It follows:

"If I hear the sound of the shot I will make a mark with my pencil on your envelope. On making that mark
I will concentrate my whole being. If the mark is there it will be known definitely that a man with a bullet in his heart doesn't die at once."

When Mayo did not appear at the office employees broke open a room adjoining his laboratory, where he sometimes slept, and found his body.

There was no mark on the envelope.
Mayo constructed an apparatus
which required a minimum of strength
in the discharge of the revolver and insured perfect aim.

Mayo was a graduate of the University of Munich. He practiced medicine twelve years in New York city.

PAUPER HAD $820 IN SHOE.

Aged Woman's Secret Out, She Agrees
to Pay Board Bill.

Although she had been a public
charge as an inmate of the Orange City home at Livingston, N. J., since last August, it was brought to light that since that time Mrs. Margaret Mulligan, seventy years old, had been carrying in her shoe $820 in bills.

A bill of $88.10 for her board since
the admission to the home was promptly presented. She agreed to pay it and to reimburse St. Mary's hospital, Orange, for care and treatment received last summer. Then she made arrangements to be taken into the Home
of Divine Providence at Ridgewood.

LOTS OF LITTLE JOFFRES NOW.

Name of Commander Popular at French Christenings.

Study of the daily lists of dead in the press has drawn attention to the birth lists, where the women of France
are "mentioned in the order of the day."

The choice of names is interesting.
Joffre and Joffrine are noticeable.
France has come into use, and Alexandra, Mary and Elizabeth record the allances of 1914. Names with any Germanic turn have apparently dropped out of the young mother's vocabulary.

BABIES BORN IN THE WHITE HOUSE

President's Grandson First Boy
Since Tyler's Time.

ONE NOTABLE CHRISTENING.

First Child Having Honor of Being
Born in Historic Mansion Was James Madison Randolph, Son of Martha Jefferson Randolph, Daughter of President Jefferson.

The baby born to Mrs. Francis B.
Sayre, daughter of President Wilson,
is the first boy born in the White House since Tyler was president. The last one was a grandson of President Tyler. The only living persons, except the new White House baby, who were born in the historic mansion are the Princess Cantacuzene of Russia, who was Miss Julia Dent Grant, daughter of the late Major General Frederick Dent Grant, and Miss Esther Cleveland, second daughter of President Cleveland. Miss Cleveland was born in September, 1863.

Besides the Sayre baby ten other children, six girls and four boys, have been born in the White House, most of them being the grandsons or granddaughters of presidents.

The first child having the honor of being born in the historic mansion was James Madison Randolph, the son of Martha Jefferson Randolph, the daughter of President Jefferson. The baby came during a visit of Mrs. Randolph to the White House in the winter of 1805-6.

There were no births in the White House during the administrations of Presidents Madison and Monroe. During the term of John Quincy Adams a granddaughter, Mary Louise Adams, was born in February, 1828. While Andrew Jackson was president four children were born there, the sons and daughters of Major Andrew J. Donel-son, General Jackson's protégé and private secretary, and Mrs. Donelson, the president's niece. Mrs. Donelson was mistress of the White House following Mrs. Jackson's death.

Big Christening Ceremony.

Two of her children were boys and two were girls. Their christenings were occasions of great ceremony. President Jackson being godfather to two of them and Martin Van Buren and General Polk acting in similar capacities
for the other two.

During the administrations of Presidents Van Buren and William Henry Harrison no children were born in the White House, but two came during Tyler's term of office. The first was Letitia Tyler, granddaughter of the president and daughter of Mr. and Mrs.
Robert Tyler. The second was Robert
Jones, youngest son of Mrs. Mary Jones, daughter of the president, and Henry Lightfoot Jones, Robert Jones
fought in General Lee's army during the civil war and was promoted for gallantry at the battle of Gettysburg.

The administrations of Presidents
Polk, Taylor, Fillmore, Pierce, Lincoln
and Johnson passed without births in the executive mansion. During the term of President Grant a daughter—Julia—was born to Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant, the wife of a son of the president, on June 7, 1876. Esther Cleveland, the daughter of President and Mrs. Cleveland, was the only child of a president ever born in the White House.

Another daughter was born to President and Mrs. Cleveland during Mr.
Cleveland's second term as president,
but this event took place at Marion,
Mass., on Buzzard's bay, where the family were occupying a cottage. The first child of President and Mrs. Cleveland was "Baby Ruth," who died
when she was growing into womanhood. She was born in New York city between the two terms served by her father as president.

INFANT SHAPED AS MERMAID.

"White" Child Born of Colored Parents
Puzzles Baltimore Scientists.

So strangely proportioned as to resemble strikingly the mythical mermaid, a child born in Salisbury, Md.,
is now being studied by scientists in the museum of the University hospital
in Baltimore.

The freak, though of colored parentage, is as white as ivory, perfectly formed above the waist line, and has normal arms and chest, but from the diaphragm down the body tapers to a point, at which the feet protrude,
forming a fanlike, finny substance.
The bones of the legs, merged into a solid mass, are covered by rough, partly ossified skin. This scaly covering gives way to white, smooth skin at the waist line.

Dr. Henry Chandlee, X ray expert of the University hospital, has called in scientists, but all are at a loss to explain the monstrosity.

Armor For French Soldier.

Paris Mirror gives photographs of an armored warrior, reminiscent of the crusades, representing the latest French device for safely observing enemies from the nearest French trenches. The armor consists of a half inch chilled
steel oblong shield to turn bullets, a headpiece pierced by two eyeholes and a breastplate, the total weight of which is more than sixty pounds. Leg protection is unnecessary, as the soldier's lower half is hidden by his own trench.

A Hold-Up.

Parson Johnson—"Do contribution
dis morning will be fo' de purpose ob

amount am collected!—Puck.

SYSTEMATIZE FARM WORK.

Being able to systematize the work so that the manure can be hauled out and applied so as not to interfere with the other work
and at the same time derive the full benefit will be found quite an item, and whichever plan
will do this to the best advantage should be adopted.—Farm Progress.

STUDY OF SOILS.

Knowledge That is Necessary For Intelligent Farming.

It is surprising how seldom the average landowner stops to question or show the slightest curiosity as to what caused certain crops to achieve success
and what helped others to entire failure, writes Edward K. Parkinson in the New York Evening Post. A little administrative machinery, a small outlay on proper garden soil or a little irrigation for a parched plain will sometimes turn failure on the land into triumph for us and solve the problem
quite satisfactorily.

But there is a lack of the most elementary knowledge—or shall we call it interest?—as to definite agricultural ideas and plans, to be noted in large sections of this country, as is evidenced by our reputation abroad for being extravagant, haphazard and careless farmers. Now, to the unobserving
the difference in soils is merely a difference in color. One is a deep chocolate brown, another is a light brown or a third is of a yellowish texture. In reality these differences in color are plain indications to the discerning that certain components of a soil predominate. For illustration, a freshly turned furrow in a soil where clay pre-
dominates will be grayish, while if it were what is known as a loamy soil
it would have the color of light chocolate.

Thus the leading characteristics of soils should of necessity be studied, for only by understanding something of the physical composition of soil in our gardens is it possible to apply fertilizer intelligently and so avoid confusion and hopeless guesswork.

All varieties of soil may be divided into two great classes, according to the method of their formation—"sedentary"
and "transported." Sedentary soils are those formed by the weathering of rocks in the places where the soil is found or from the accumulation of organic matter, as, for instance, in marshes. Transported soils are made up of materials which have been moved by some agency, such as water, ice or wind, to the place they now occupy.

To know just how to treat these soils one must be familiar with the components of soils—namely, sand, silt,
clay and humus—and the combinations
in which they are usually found.

Shed For Machinery.

When done with the farm machinery
put it in the shed after thoroughly oil-ing and the application of paint to the wooden parts if needed. The weak points in many farms is the lack of sufficient room for tools or implements.
It will pay any farmer to have a special building in which to keep his implements, machines, wagons, sleds,
etc., when not in use. It need not be an expensive one.

Value of Sheep Manure.

In ten tons of solid and liquid sheep
manure there are 250 pounds of nitrogen, 31 pounds of phosphoric acid and 241 pounds of potash. In the same amount of cattle manure there are only 87 pounds of nitrogen, 17 pounds of phosphoric acid and 51 pounds of potash. These figures are sufficient in themselves to show why the foot of the sheep is golden to the land.

Mixing Box For Wet Mash.

A poultry keeper who feeds one to three pails of wet mash daily will find that a 36 by 24 by 6 inch box, consisting of a sheet zinc nailed to the under edges of four wooden sides, is a great time saver, says a contributor to the Orange Judd Farmer. It provides an ideal surface to shovel on as well as being moisture proof and sanitary. The long sides and one end are perpendicular to the zinc bottom, but the other end flares outward at an angle of 45
degrees.

The wood used may be white pine,
cypress, yellow pine or whitewood.
To give the box the required solidity
the sides are one and one-quarter inch

plank, but the end boards need only be of seven-eighths inch stock. The materials necessary for one box are as follows: One sheet zinc, 32 by 24 inches; sixteen screws, one and one-half inches long; one-half pound of wire lath nails; one piece of planed plank 6 by 6 by 14 inches and one piece of planed board 4 by 6 by 7 1/2 inches.

A larger sized box, measuring 48 by 36 by 7 inches, will easily hold four to seven pails of mash for mixing. I have tried out this larger size and found it very efficient. The great saving of initial cost over that of a power
mixer is a strong argument in its fa-

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Warrington, an American adventurer, and James, his servant, with a caged parrot, the trio known up and down the Irrawaddy as Parrot & Co., travel along the road to the landing, bound for Rangoon to cash a draft for $5000 rupees.

CHAPTER II—Elsa Chetwood, rich American girl, tourist, sees Warrington come aboard the boat at the landing and, amazed at his likeness to her fiancé, Arthur Ellison, asks the purser to introduce her. Conservative English passengers are shocked at her breach of the conventionalities.

CHAPTER III—The purser tells Elsa that Warrington, the outcast adventurer, has beaten a syndicate and sold his oil claims for $250,000. Warrington puts Rajah, the parrot, through his tricks for Elsa and warns her against acquaintance with unknown adventurers—himself, in fact.

CHAPTER IV—Warrington and Elsa pass two golden days together on the river. Martha, Elsa's companion, warns her that there is gossip.

CHAPTER V—In Rangoon Warrington banks his draft, pays old debts, and while settling with James in his old lodgings overhears and interferes in a row over cards in the next room.

CHAPTER VI—Warrington finds that the row in the next room is caused by an enemy, Newell Craig, and threatens to shoot him unless he leaves town. Elsa goes for a walk with Martha, is annoyed by Craig and stabs him with a hatpin. Warrington bids Elsa good-by. She does not tell him that she is to sail on the same ship for Singapore.

CHAPTER VII—Martha writes to Arthur Ellison of the rapidly growing friendship between Elsa and the outcast American adventurer. Warrington discovers Elsa on the Singapore steamer and realizes his hopeless love and his duty to protect her against himself. Elsa tells him of her engagement.

CHAPTER VIII.

A Woman's Reason.

Elsa stared at the vacant doorway. She recognized only a sense of bewilderment. This was not one of those childish flashes of rudeness that had amused, annoyed and mystified her. She had hurt him. And how? They had been together three days on the boat, and once he had taken tea with her in Rangoon. She could find nothing save that she had been kind to him when he most needed kindness, and that she had not been stupidly curious, only sympathetically so. He interested her and held that interest because he was a type unlike anything she had met outside the covers of a book. He was so big and strong, and yet so boyish. He had given her visions of the character which had carried his manhood through all these years of strife and bitterness and temptation. And because of this she had shown him that she had taken it for granted that whatever he had done in the past had not put him beyond the pale of her friendship. There had been no degrading entanglements, and women forgive or condone all other transgressions.

And what had she just said or done to put that look of dumb agony in his face? She swung impatiently from the rail and began to promenade the deck, still cluttered with luggage over which the Lascar stewards were moiling. Many a glance followed the supple pleasing figure of the girl as she passed round and round the deck. Other promenaders stepped aside or permitted her to pass between them. The resolute uplift of the chin, and the staring dark eyes which saw but inner visions, impressed them with the fact that it would be wiser to step aside voluntarily. There were some, however, who considered that they had as much right to the deck as she. Before them she would stop shortly, and as a current breaks and passes each side of an immovable object, they, too, gave way.

The colonel fussed and fumed, and his three spinster charges drew their pale lips into thinner paler lips. "These Americans are impossible!" "And it is scandalous the way the young women travel alone. One can never tell what they are."

"Humph! Brag and assertiveness. And there's that ruffian who came down the river. What's he doing on the same boat? What?"

Elsa became aware of their presence at the fifth turn. She nodded absently. Being immersed in the sea of conjecture regarding Warrington's behavior, the colonel's glare did not rouse in her the sense of impending disaster.

The first gong for dinner boomed. The echoing wall spoke in the voice of the East, of its dalliance, its content to drift in a sargasso sea of entangling habits and desires, of its fatalism and inertia. It did not hearken one or excite hunger. Elsa would rather have lain down in her Canton lounge-chair. The dining saloon held two long tables, only one of which was in commission, the starboard. The saloon was unattractive. A punka stretched from one end of the table to the other, and swung idly to and fro, whining mysteriously, sometimes subsiding altogether and then flapping hysterically and setting the women's hair awry.

Elsa and Martha were seated somewhere between the head and the foot of the table. The personally conducted surrounded them, and gabbled incessantly during the meal of what they had seen, of what they were going to see, and of what they had missed by not going with the other agency's party. Elsa's sympathy went out to the tired and faded conductor.

There was but one vacant chair; and as she saw Warrington nowhere, Elsa assumed that this must be his reservation. She was rather glad that he would be beyond conversational radius. She liked to talk to the strange and lonely man, but she preferred to be alone with him when she did so.

She began as of old to study carefully the faces of the diners and to speculate as to their characters and occupations. Her negligent observation roved from the pompous captain down to the dark picturesque face of the man Craig. Upon him her glance, a mixture of contempt and curiosity, rested. If he behaved himself and made no attempt to speak to her, she was willing to declare a truce. In Rangoon the man had been drunk, but on the Irrawaddy boat he had been sober enough. Craig kept his eyes directed upon his food and did not offer her even a furtive glance.

He was not in a happy state of mind. He had taken passage the last moment to avoid meeting again the one man he feared. For ten years this man had been reckoned among the lost. Many believed him dead, and Craig had wished it rather than believed. And then, to meet him face to face in that sordid boarding house had shaken the cool nerve of the gambler. He was worried and bewildered. He had practically sent this man to ruin. What would be the reprisal? He reached for a mangoes and ate the white pulpy contents, but without the customary relish. The phrase kept running through his head: What would be the reprisal? For men of his ilk never struck without expecting to be struck back. Something must be done. Should he seek him and boldly ask what he intended to do? Certainly he could not do much on board here, except to denounce him to the officers as a professional gambler. And Paul would scarcely do that since he, Craig, had a better shot in his gun. He could tell who Paul was and what he had done. Bodily harm was what he really feared.

He had seen Elsa, but he had worked out that problem easily. She was sure to say nothing so long as he let her be; and with the episode of the hatpin still fresh in his memory, he assuredly would keep his distance. He had made a mistake, and was not likely to repeat it.

But Paul! He finished his dessert and went off to the stuffy little smoke-room, and struggled with a Burma cheroot. Paul was a smoker, and sooner or later he would drop in. He waited in vain for his man that night. And so did Elsa. She felt indignant at one moment and hurt at another. The man's attitude was inexplicable; there was neither rhyme nor reason in it. The very fact that she could not understand made her wonder march beside her even in her dreams that night. She began to feel genuinely sorry that he had appeared above her horizon. Just before she retired she leaned over the rail, watching the reflection of the stars twist and shiver on the smooth water. Suddenly she listened. She might have imagined it, for at night the ears deceive. "Jah, jah!" Somewhere from below came the muffled plaint of Rajah.

Next day, at luncheon, the chair was still vacant. Elsa became alarmed. Perhaps he was ill. She made inquiries, regardless of the possible misinterpretation her concern might be given by others. Mr. Warrington had had his meals served in his cabin, but the steward declared that the gentleman was not ill, only tired and irritable, and that he amused himself with a trained parakeet.

All day long the sea lay waveless and unrippled, a sea of brass and lapis-lazuli; brass where the sun struck and lapis-lazuli in the shadow of the lazy swells. Schools of flying-fish broke fan-wise in flashes of silver, and porpoise sported alongside. And warmer and warmer grew the air.

Starboard was rigged up for cricket, and the ship's officers and some of the passengers played the game until the first gong. Elsa grumbled to Martha. There was little enough space to walk in as it was without the men taking over the whole side of the ship and cheating her out of a glorious sunset. Martha grew troubled and perplexed. If there was one phase of character unknown to her in Elsa it was irritability; and here she was, finding fault like any ordinary tourist.

"Where is Mr. Warrington?" "I don't know. I haven't seen him since yesterday." Elsa dropped her book petulantly. "I am weary of these namby-pamby stories."

Martha's eyes had a hopeless look in them as she asked: "Elsa, what is the matter?"

"I don't know, Martha. I believe I should like to lose my temper utterly. I'm irritable because I do not know my own mind. I hate the stuffy stateroom, the food, the captain. Nothing seems to disturb his conceit. Tonight we sleep on deck, the starboard side. At five o'clock we have to get up and go inside again so they can hoist-stone the deck. And I am always sound asleep at that time. Doubtless, I shall be irritable all day tomorrow."

"Sleep up here on deck? But the men?" "Horrid."

"They sleep on the port side." Elsa laughed maliciously. "Don't worry. Nobody minds."

"I hate the East," declared Martha vindictively. "Everything is so slack. It just brings out the shiftlessness in everybody."

"Perhaps that is what ails me; I am growing shiftless. When I came on board I decided to marry Arthur, and have done with the matter. Now I am at the same place as when I left home. I don't want to marry anybody. Have you noticed that fellow Craig?" "What will you do if he speaks?" "I have half a dozen good hatpins left," dryly.

"I hate to hear you talk like that." "It's the East. . . . There goes that hateful gong again. Soup, chicken, curry, rice and piceahili. I am going to live on plantains and mangoes. I'm glad we had sense enough to order that distilled water. Come; we'll go down as we are to dinner, and watch the ridiculous captain and his fan-bearer. The punka will at least give us a breath of fresh air. There doesn't seem to be any on deck. One regrets Darjeeling."

Martha followed her young mistress into the dining-saloon; she was anxious and upset. Where would this mood end? With a glance of relief she found Warrington's chair still vacant.

The saloon had an air of desolation tonight. All the men were in dill or pongee, and so receptive is the imagination that the picture robbed the room of half its heat. To and fro the punka flapped; the pulleys creaked and the ropes scraped above the sound of knives and forks and spoons.

Elsa ate little besides fruit. She spoke scarcely a word to Martha, and none to those around her. Thus, she missed the frown of the colonel and the tilted brows of the spinsters, and the curious glances of the tourists.

The passenger list had not yet come from the ship's press, so Elsa's name was practically unknown. But in some unaccountable manner it had become known that she had been making inquiries in regard to the gentleman in cabin 78, who had thus far remained away from the table. Ship life is a dull life, and gossip is about the only thing that makes it possible to live through the day. It was quite easy to couple this unknown aloof young woman and the invisible man, and then to wait for results. It would have amused Elsa had she known the interest she had already created if not inspired. Her beauty and her apparent indifference to her surroundings were particularly adapted to the romantic mood of her fellow-travelers. Her own mind was so broad and generous, so high and detached, that so sordid a thing as "an affair" never entered her thoughts.

As she refused course after course, a single phrase drammed incessantly through her tired brain. She was not going to marry Arthur; never, never in this world. She did not love him, and this was to be final. She would cable him from Singapore.

That night Craig found it insupportable in the cabin below; so he ordered his steward to bring up his bedding. He had lain down for half an hour, grown restless, and had begun to walk the deck in his bath slippers. He had noted the still white figure for ward, where the cross-rail marks the waist. As he approached, Craig discovered his man. He hesitated only a moment; then he touched Warrington's arm.

Warrington turned his dull eyes upon his ancient enemy. "So it's you? I understood you were on board. Well?" uncompromisingly.

"I've been looking for you. Bygones are bygones, and what's done can't be undone by punching a fellow's head. I'm not looking for trouble," went on Craig, gaining assurance. "I am practically down and out myself. What stand are you going to take on board here? That's all I want to know."

"It would give me great pleasure, Craig, to take you by the scruff of your neck and drop you overboard. But as you say, what's been done can't be remedied by bashing in a man's head. Well, here you are, since you ask. If you speak to me, if I catch you playing cards or auctioneering a pool, if you make yourself obnoxious to any of the passengers, I promise to give you the finest thrashing you ever had, the moment we reach Penang. If you don't go ashore there, I'll do it in Singapore. Have I made myself clear?"

"That's square enough, Paul," said the gambler resignedly. There wasn't much money on board these two-by-four boats, anyhow, so he wasn't losing much.

Warrington leaned forward. "Paul? You said Paul?"

"Why, yes," wonderingly.

"Better go."

"All right," Craig returned to his mattress. "Now, what made him curl up like that because I called him Paul? Bah! He dug a hole in his pillow and tried to sleep."

Sale to commence at 10 o'clock a. m., when terms and conditions will be made known by D. E. A. HANKEY, G. R. Thompson, Auc.

"Paul!" murmured Warrington. He stared down at the flashes of phosphorescence, blindly. The man had called him Paul. After ten years to learn the damnable treachery of it! Suddenly he clenched his hand and struck the rail. He would go back. All his loyalty, all his chivalry, had gone for naught. This low rascal had called him Paul.

6 KILLED, 22 INJURED IN RAID

German Bombs Deal Death and Destruction.

PEOPLE PANIC STRICKEN

England Doubts Whether Giant Zeppelin Machines Participated In Bombardment.

London, Jan. 21.—Six persons were killed and twenty-two were injured in the German air raid over England.

Two of the dead are soldiers, three are women and one a boy. Thirty-two houses were destroyed and many others damaged.

Most of the damage appears to have been inflicted on private houses and shops; few public buildings or docks seem to have been injured. The property damage is estimated at $15,000.

The most important towns over which the German airmen appeared were Sandringham, Yarmouth, Sheringham, Hunstanton, Cromer, Heacham, Dersingham and Kings Lynn. Unofficial dispatches say a Zeppelin also appeared over Ipswich, in Suffolk county, seventy-five miles southwest of Yarmouth.

Doubt has been expressed in some quarters whether the raiders came in Zeppelins or in aeroplanes. In Sheringham and Cromer persons say they saw the aircraft, and their description indicates that they were Zeppelins. At the same time dispatches from Yarmouth say it is believed there that the craft used were large aeroplanes.

The small size of the bombs and the few missiles dropped supports the theory that they were not Zeppelins, as those air vessels could carry a much more formidable cargo of explosives.

The raiding airmen showed excellent ability in piloting their vessels, as well as good marksmanship. In spite of the darkness of the night, they seemed to find their way over the country with remarkable directness, and the accuracy of their aim with bombs was greater than generally had been believed possible.

Panic has followed the raid. Insurance rates against damage by Zeppelins in London are rising. In the damaged towns the terror which followed the attack is unabated. A hunt for German spies was begun, as a result of reports that signals had been flashed to the raiding Zeppelins at Yarmouth. According to these reports a signal was given from a house near the Aquarium theater, in Yarmouth, just before the attack began.

With a lull in the battle along the center of the line from Soissons to Rheims, where the French suffered so severely last week, the scene of action has shifted to the two wings of the battle front in the western zone of war. At both places violent attacks and counter attacks have been delivered, and both Berlin and Paris claim progress.

In the eastern part of France and along the Meuse the French say that they have made substantial gains and that they are now within ten miles of the outer forts of Metz, the German stronghold.

In that region the French have hurled forward large numbers of troops in an endeavor to isolate the German forces holding St. Mihiel and the lines of communication leading to that position, and late reports from official sources in Paris say that the French have captured nearly a third of a mile of German fortified positions about three miles from the German frontier east of St. Mihiel, the objective of the French efforts in that section of the battle zone in France.

This success, as reported from Paris, is of great importance, and marks the progress of a definite strategic movement to force the Germans from French soil along the Meuse.

Berlin dispatches say that at Notre Dame de Lorette, northwest of Arras, the Germans have captured 200 yards of the allies' trenches, as well as two machine guns and a few prisoners. At other places in that section of the battle front artillery exchanges are taking place.

In Alsace, where the allies were making progress until checked recently by the arrival of German reinforcements, they now apparently are on the defensive.

German Statement.

Berlin, Jan. 21.—The following official statement was issued here: "In the night of the 19th and 20th German airplanes bombarded the fortified town of Yarmouth and other places on the English seacoast. The attack was successful and considerable damage was done. The airplanes were shelled, but regained their home port unhurt."

Says Russians Have Lost 1,800,000.

Berlin, Jan. 21.—The Munich Post prints a letter said to have been written by a Russian princess, saying it is estimated that the Russian losses from Aug. 1 to Nov. 20 have been 500,000 killed and 1,300,000 wounded.

Francis Joseph May Quit.

London, Jan. 21.—A Rome dispatch to the Star says: "It is persistently rumored here that Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria has decided to abdicate."

ADDITION TO STEEL PLANT

Six Hundred Will Be Employed In Putting Fuse In Shrapnel Shells. South Bethlehem, Pa., Jan. 21.—The big fuse plant the Bethlehem Steel company is erecting at its Redington proving grounds is nearly ready to be put in operation.

More than 600 will be given employment. The plant will consist of several buildings, with the loading plant isolated from the rest. The building of this plant Charles M. Schwab found was necessary following the orders from the British government.

The shrapnel shells are manufactured at the South Bethlehem plant at the rate of 3000 a day. Some of them are loaded there also, but the fuses will all be inserted at Redington. The construction of the plant was begun four months ago and before a single order had been received.

GARZA WORKING TO RESTORE ORDER

Mexican Chief Retains Cabinet Officials.

Mexico City, Jan. 21.—Provisional President Roque Gonzalez Garza has made the following statement:

"The chief officials of each ministerial department will continue to discharge the duties of their positions."

"I have already informed the diplomatic corps of my selection as president by the convention, under whose order I have assumed the executive authority."

"Torreón is a city without strategic importance, and for that reason the general offices of the railroads will be installed there."

Francisco Lagos Chazaro, a governor during the regime of President Madero, has been appointed secretary to President Garza.

Obregon Near Mexico City.

Washington, Jan. 21.—The Carranza agency here issued the following statement: "Vera Cruz reports that General Obregon, with a large force, is within a short distance of the capital, and is expected to occupy the place almost immediately."

Car Plant on Thirteen Hours.

Milton, Pa., Jan. 21.—Announcement was made here that the Milton branch of the American Car and Foundry company will go on thirteen hours a day instead of nine. Additional men will be given employment and the outlook is for steady work. The company builds all of its tank cars for the east at this point, and more than 500 men will be affected.

THE KITCHEN CUPBOARD

WHEN YOU SERVE BACON.

BREAKFAST MENU.
White Grapes (Cereal).
Fried Eggs with Bacon.
Toast, Coffee.

BACON would be more popular were it served in a greater variety of ways. It may be cooked alone or combined with other foods with success.

Cooked With Eggs.

Fried Eggs With Bacon.—Take four eggs, four slices of bacon, four sprigs of parsley. Put the bacon in a hot pan, keep turning all the time and remove the drippings. When the bacon is crisp remove from pan and put in the eggs, reducing the heat. The eggs must fry slowly. When done on one side or both sides put on hot platter. Garnish with bacon and parsley.

A Tempting Dish.

Bacon and Egg Balls.—Have some hot fat in a deep pan. The temperature should be that necessary for fritters. Stir it until it whirls around quickly. Now break an egg into this miniature whirlpool and keep the fritter turning with the stick till the egg is of the consistency of a poached one and quite round; then lift it out and lay it in a hot dish. Let the dish lean toward the fire to keep the eggs hot. Do as many more as you require in the same way. They will keep hot and soft in the dish before the fire for quite half an hour. Serve either on a square of fried bacon placed on a fried crouton or on a dish with little curls of fried bacon between.

Delicious With Cream.

Creamed Bacon on Toast.—Take half a pound of thinly sliced bacon, a cupful of milk, a tablespoonful of flour, four pieces of toast, four sprigs of parsley. Put the bacon in a hot frying pan and fry until crisp. Drain off fat and mix. Then add the cold milk slowly. Boil three minutes slowly stir quite often. Serve on toast garnished with parsley.

Served With Sauce.

Fried Bacon With Cream Sauce.—Slice bacon thin and put into hot frying pan, keep turning until brown, but not hard. Remove, put on slices of toast. Put a tablespoonful of flour into the pan with bacon fat, mix until smooth, put over fire. Add a cupful of cold milk and boil two minutes, adding a little pepper and salt. Stir until smooth and creamy. Pour over the bacon and garnish with a little chopped parsley.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Especially For This Newspaper by Pictorial Review

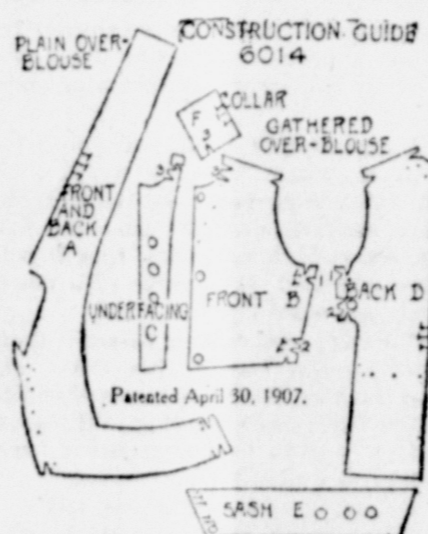

COTTON GABARDINE AND SILK.

Fashions for spring are pouring in thick and fast, and there are delightful novelties among the new offerings. This frock, for instance, is carried out in cotton gabardine, dotted muslin and silk. The cost is really inconsiderable when the smart effect of the model is observed. For the guimpe 1 yard of 36-inch material is required; for the skirt, 3½ yards 44-inch cotton gabardine and for the overblouse, 1½ yard 36-inch silk.

Today's lesson is confined to the development of the overblouse, which is cut from a fold of the materials used. Either a plain or gathered effect may be evolved. For the plain effect first turn hem at front and back edges at notches, finding the center-front by the single small "o" perforations and the center-back by double "oo" perforations. Lap at center-front and close in front or back.

For the gathered overblouse adjust underfacing to position underneath front, corresponding edges even. Center-front indicated by large "O" perforations. Roll front on small "o" perforations to form revers. Gather side edge, also end of sash between double "TT" perforations. Adjust sash on back, matching small and large "O" perforations and draw in gathers to fit. Close under-arm seam as notched and it desired leave left under-arm seam free and finish with hooks and eyes for closing. Close shoulder seam.

The guimpe is cut from a simple waist and has long sleeves, finished with ruffles.

Too Short an Acquaintance.

"Of course, I don't wish to put any obstacle in the way of your getting married," a mistress said to her servant, "but I wish it were possible for you to postpone it until I get another maid." One Benefit of Wealth.

Drawing the Line.

"How about a tar roof for your hotel?" asked the agent. "Not in this town," declared the landlord of the Unpleasantville house. "The boys have already carried off half my beds for tar-and-feather parties. I don't want em to begin on my roof."

CLEARANCE SALE PICKINGS

JUST AS GOOD AS AT ANY TIME

Because new things out of stock have been added to take the place of those sold.
Addition of Greatest Importance is Muslin Underwear

All the twos, threes and fours of any one kind of garment has been marked for quick selling. SKIRTS, GOWNS, CORSET COVERS and DRAWERS, a good assortment much under regular price; a few are mussed from showing. Our regular lines of MUSLIN UNDERWEAR from which these were selected are especially well made in clean daylight factories and are often priced at less than the prices so much advertised in White Goods Sales in City Stores.

Owing to the condition of the cotton market for some time, coupled with the fact that the industries of the whole country have been affected for various causes, many thousands being in enforced idleness, prices on staple cotton fabrics have not been so low temporarily as they were at the first of the year for a long time when we bought heavily. On many lines, where mills have unloaded, prices have materially stiffened and we predict still heavier advances that come with the demand.

HAPPILY FOOLED

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

"My dear," said Mr. Phillips to his wife, "don't you think that Lucy
should be thinking about providing for herself by marrying?"

"Lucy marry! Why, my goodness
gracious, the child isn't four months past fifteen. She won't be thinking about matrimony for three or four years yet at least, and if she goes to college it's more likely to be six or seven. What put that into your head?"

"Why, I was thinking—you know how much money I have lost lately—this Tommy Harding who came home with her from school the other day will come into quite a fortune when he is twenty-one. If the kids could be united I wouldn't worry about Lucy. As it is I'm constantly wondering what you and she would do in case I should be cut off."

"You're not going to be cut off. At any rate, nothing can be done about marrying Lucy till she has got out of childhood. Why, she's scarcely left off
playing with her doll."

"Well, I suppose you're right about
it. Lucy is only a child, and she's got her education before her."

Nevertheless the husband's suggestion effected a lodgment in his wife's mind, and she regretted that the children were too young to be brought together. Tommy was a nice boy, and it was known that he would come into a substantial fortune. Mrs. Phillips would have liked to bridge over three or four years for her daughter, though,
since Tommy was but a year older than Lucy, he would need even more time than this to develop into full manhood.

However, the matter of uniting the children when they should become older
had got into Mrs. Phillips' head,
and she couldn't let the matter alone.
One day Mr. Phillips said to her:

"What's become of Tommy? I have not seen him around here for a long while."

"He's not coming so much now as he did."

"What's the trouble?"

"Well, it's your fault. You seemed to be so anxious that Lucy should secure his fortune that in order to help
the matter out I sort of teased Lucy
about him."

"You mean in order to gratify your curiosity?"

"Anyway, what I said proved that my claim that she was too young to think about such things is correct. A childish friendship has been broken by suggesting love."

"I see."

"If you hadn't got it into your head
that a marriage could be arranged between two children it all might have come about in time of itself."

"Rather if you had stuck to your own opinion and let the matter alone
Lucy might have in the end been provided for."

A month or two later another dialogue took place between Mr. and Mrs.
Phillips about what the former called
"scaring the children off."

"Pa," said the lady, "I think whatever damage I did when I spoke to Lucy about Tommy may have passed.
I met them coming home from school
the other day, and they were walking together. Tommy was carrying Lucy's books. She looked put out when she saw me. And Tommy handed her her books and went off in another direction. I'm sorry I said anything to make them feel embarrassment. Such things should never be suggested between children. It takes away the freedom, the sweet innocence of childhood."

"I expressed a wish, and you acted upon it, which was the worst thing you could have done. Don't think any more about it. By the time the kids get old enough to marry they'll both have changed and each will marry
some one else."

The last conversation between these fond parents was in this wise. Mr.
Phillips had arisen and was standing before the glass shaving. His wife had gone forth in a wrapper and curl
papers to waken Lucy:

"Oh, my goodness gracious, pa!"

"What is it?" turning sharply with a razor in his hand and one-half his face lathered, the other side smooth.

His wife staggered to a chair.

"Lucy is not in her room."

"Where is she?"

"She isn't in the house."

"Not in the house?"

"No" — pathetically — "she's run away."

"How do you know?"

The lady extended a bit of paper,
from which she read:

Dear Mamma and Papa—Forgive us.
We know we're doing very wrong, but we can't help it. We love each other just too dearly for anything.

"What does it mean?"

"I don't know. If Lucy wasn't so very young I would think she had eloped."

"She has eloped; of course she has!
Don't you see she says 'We love each other' and all that?"

A maid entered with a telegram.
Mr. Phillips, laying down his razor
tore off the corner and read:

We are married. Are we forgiven?
THOMAS HARDING.

Mr. Phillips as he looked up from the message was a model for a comic artist. His suspenders were down behind, half his face was covered with lather, and on it was the smile of one who had been sold, but to his especial satisfaction.

"Ma," he said, "I thought you said they were kids. But Lucy's got a fortune."

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Thickness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff.
Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scraggly and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way
is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so easily. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft
and luxuriant.

About Public Sale Advertising

Placing bills and cards in public places too far in advance of your sale is bad policy because they frequently become destroyed, lost or covered over by other advertising. But it is important that they be there long enough to give the prospective purchaser an opportunity to make up his mind about buying. You know a careful man does not decide to buy a horse or cow or wagon without giving it some consideration.

Bills and cards will help; will pay for themselves, many times over.
The publicity upon which you have to depend is

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING.

It is through the paper that you will reach people you could see no other way. To call at from 3500 to 4000 homes describing your articles for sale would be practically impossible but The Times and the Adams County News are welcome visitors at that many houses. If your sale is published in these papers you know it will come before the attention of that many people. Then if the buyers do not come it is a pretty good sign that nobody wants to buy. If you do not bring it to the attention of the greatest number of people

YOU HAVE NOT DONE YOUR DUTY,

and when the crowd is poor have no one but yourself to blame.

Give your sale one or two early insertions in the newspaper. It may be worth money to you for this reason: A man who lived two miles from another who held sale last year traveled seven miles and bought a binder in the early part of the season. About three weeks later he saw his neighbor's binder advertised among his sale goods. Upon his next meeting with the neighbor he said "John I didn't know you had a binder to sell or I would have waited for your sale." Of course he didn't know it. John had not advertised his articles until two weeks before the date set for the sale. The result was the loss of a bidder who would have more than paid the cost of that extra advertisement.

This is but one of the things our experience at The Times office in sale advertising has taught us. Stop in and talk over your sale with us, we may be able to help you and will do it gladly.
